THE DAILY JOURNAL

Is the best daily paper published on the line of the Central Pacific Railroad, east of Sacramento, and having a general circulation throughout the State. It is especially valuable as an advertising medium.

THE DAILY AND WEEKLY JOURNAL have a combined circulation larger than that of any interior journal of Nevada, excepting those on the Comstock.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN.

There are many at the age of thirty to sixty who are troubled with too frequent evacuation of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation, and a weakening of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examining the urinary deposits a very sediment will often be found and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of a thin milky hue, again changing to a dark and turbid appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. Dr. S. will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases and a healthy restoration of the genital urinary organs.

Kearney is stumping California for the Workingmen. Santa Ana is not down on his list of places to speak. A Gantling gun will be sent there instead.

The friends of Porter, the murdered actor, have raised a fund of $4,100 to prosecute Currie, but Currie's friends in Texas are said to have subscribed $23,000 for his defense.

Hon. Thos. Wren will address the Eureka anti-Chinese Association Saturday evening upon the probable future action of Congress upon this important question.

The Eureka Grand Jury approves the manner in which the new court-house is being built. The Sentinel regards the work, so far as it has gone, the very best ever done on a public building in Eastern Nevada.

Late English journals contain in their South African correspondence, abundant evidence that young Napoleon was permitted to carry his life in his hand through every hazardous adventure suggested by his reckless courage.

The people are snatching their lips in anticipation of a rich feast in the next issue of the Argonaut. Gorham promised to post Pixley if the latter talked back. Nevertheless we think that there will be some back talk. And it will be very juicy.

Mr. John Duff, who has made more than $50,000 out of "Pinafore," expresses the belief that all other attempts in that direction will fail. It has killed everything of the kind in advance. No one can write anything better, and nothing which is not better can succeed.

The New York Star thinks that the practice of appointing Congressional picnic parties to rove over the country during the hot weather, under a pretense of discharging public duties, is not an economical practice. Besides, the moral effect of keeping members so long away from their wives and families is bad.

The Washington Star says that Senator Conkling gave a dinner at Wormley's to a number of Republican leaders, and, finding no response to his question as to the one who should be the choice after Grant, rose and said he would bring forward William Windom, of Minnesota, as a Northwestern man. Billy Windom should immediately dye his horse a dark color.

The three New York newsboys who have saved sixty persons from drowning have retired from their work of danger and philanthropy. They retire disgusted with the neglect of pretended friends and benefactors. Thus a noble lesson is afforded the youth of the metropolis. They are taught to look out for No. 1, because, if they don't, no one else will look after that personage.

DAN SICKLES FOR SECRETARY OF WAR.—General Daniel E. Sickles is in Washington and has been in consultation with a number of leading officials and politicians. It is understood that he has been proposed to the President for appointment as Secretary of War, to succeed Mr. McCrary, when the latter renders his resignation from that office, next month. Democratic gossip says that the President is quite favorable to the appointment of so shrewd and skillful a political manager as General Sickles, whose services would be highly valuable in forwarding the interests of Secretary Sherman for the Presidential nomination.

A circular was issued to the Postmasters Monday by the Acting Assistant Postmaster-General relative to the entry of second-class matter. Section 199 of the Postal Laws and Regulations provides that after a publication has been determined to be of the second-class, the publisher thereof may, if he so desires, formally enter the same at the Postoffice where mailed, and print upon each copy thereof the words, "Entered at the Postoffice as second-class matter." After quoting this section, the circular contains: "Publications so entered and having printed upon each copy the words of entry, may be exchanged at the second-class rates with other second-class publications, and may be regularly sent at second-class rates as complimentary to the customers or business agents of the publication and to other persons solely in the interest of the publication itself, or its publishers or employees as such."

THE PRINCE OF WALES' DEBT.

The Prince of Wales, who for some years past has been on the high tide of popularity, has recently given great umbrage to his Somersetshire and Cornish tenants by rescinding a decision to reduce their rents—on account of the present hard times—by twenty-five per cent. The poor Prince is placed in an awkward position; his mother's niggardliness and his own lavish disposition have combined to involve him tremendously in debt. I am told on good authority that his Royal Highness is indebted to London tradesmen alone in the sum of £2,500,000. Of course, the heir apparent can obtain unlimited credit; all his creditors are sure of their money sooner or later, and even in the event of his death before his ascension to the throne, there is no doubt of their being paid in full. Still the claims upon his purse are most pressing, and the question of "ways and means," which many a poor man has lately had to take most seriously into consideration, has not been without significance to the future King of England. Most of the landed gentry and noblemen of England have lately thought it their duty, or policy to forego a considerable portion of their income to those who till their lands. The Duke of Bedford has remitted 50 per cent. of his rents, which is a clear loss of 70,000 pounds a year to him. Whatever the fault of the Prince of Wales may be, stinginess could never be justly ascribed to him, and very dire must have been the necessity which could have induced him to alter the determination he had come to, to follow the example of so many leading peers and gentry in sacrificing a portion of their income to the pressing needs of the distracted and disheartened English farmers.—[Philadelphia Ledger.]

THE PRINCE IMPERIAL'S WILL.

The will of Prince Napoleon is published. It is written in his own hand and at Chislehurst, February 26, 1879. Following are the chief points: I die in the Catholic apostolic and Roman religion, in which I was born. I desire that my body shall be buried near that of my father, pending the time when they shall both be transported to where the founder of our house reposes in the midst of the French people, whom we have like him dearly loved. My last thought will be for my country. It is for France that I would wish to die. I constitute my well-beloved mother, the Empress Eugenie, my sole legatee, she being charged with attending to the following legacies: I leave 200,000 francs to my cousin Prince J. N. Murat; I leave 100,000 francs to M. F. Petrie in gratitude for his good services; I leave 100,000 francs to M. le Baron Corvisart, in acknowledgment of his devotion; I leave 100,000 francs to Mlle de Launay, who has always shown herself so attached to my mother; I leave 100,000 francs to M. A. Filan, my old tutor; I leave 100,000 francs to M. L. N. Commau, 100,000 francs to M. N. Espinasse, 100,000 francs to Captain A. Bezot, my oldest friends. I desire that my dear mother shall pay a pension for life of 10,000 francs to Prince L. L. Bonaparte; a life pension of 5,000 francs to M. Bechon, my old esquire, and a life pension of 2,000 francs to Mme. Thierry and to Uhlmann. I desire that all my other servants be never deprived of their situations.

THE PIUTE QUEEN.

A Letter From Her Highness to Chief Naches.

(Winnemucca Silver State.)

Naches, Chief of the Pintes, has received a letter from Sarah Winnemucca, the Piute Queen, now at Fort Simcoe, Washington Territory. She says she is well and doing well, and is now teaching a school among her people, which sixty of them, and sometimes more, attend. They have cleared about 70 acres of land and put in quite a crop of corn and potatoes. Lee Winnemucca is working for the agent at Simcoe Reservation, and Mattie, her niece, who accompanied her through the war last Summer, is dead. Twenty-one of the Pintes, who were taken to Simcoe last Winter have died, and there are quite a number of others on the sick list, many of whom are not expected to live. Those of the tribe who were taken to Vancouver as prisoners of war, she has not heard from, and she does not know what is going to be done with them. Princess Sally bankers for pine nuts, and wants Naches to send her as many of them as he can. She cannot tell when, if ever, she and her people are coming back, as they cannot leave without orders from Washington to that effect.

A LOCAL SCOURGE.

(From the Truckee Republican.)

A great danger threatens the stock in this vicinity. That danger is grasshoppers. They are invading the Truckee Basin on the North at Sardine Valley. At the latter place Mr. Schaffer is turning his stock upon his valuable hay-fields, in order that they may gain the greatest amount of good prior to the final devastation of the fields by insects. At Sardine Valley Mr. Fleckenstein is seriously alarmed lest his cattle will be unable to subsist more than a couple of weeks. He expects to have to abandon his dairy, and turn his cattle out into the woods. Even then it is doubtful if sufficient herbage can be found to keep them alive. It is probable that many stock-men will be driven from the mountains at least one month earlier than usual this Fall.

AN IRON BRIDGE.—The Gold Hill News says: It is understood that an iron bridge will be built across Crown Point ravine in Gold Hill by the Virginia and Truckee Railroad Company, to take the place of the present wooden structure. An experienced bridge-builder who has been in the employ of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, has been viewing the situation, and he says he can make the desired change without stopping or delaying a train. The wooden bridge which now spans the ravine is at present considered perfectly safe, but the company is not satisfied with it, desiring to make assurance doubly sure.

TRUCKEE ITEMS.

(Republican, 16th.)

Game is unusually plentiful in the mountains surrounding Truckee this season.

More tourists have already visited Tahoe this year than there has been during any past year.

Deer tracks are reported in large numbers at the salt licks on Deer Creek, seven miles south of Truckee.

Wild strawberries, sweet, luscious, and plentiful, cover many acres of the Donner meadows. They are ripe at present, and fishermen and tourists find them exceedingly tempting.

Rev. T. S. Uren, who has been absent some three weeks attending the Sunday School Convention at Monterey, and visiting churches and Sunday schools at various points in the State, has returned and resumed his pastoral duties.

Wild Spanish cattle, fresh from the sagebrush plains of Nevada are grazing on the Donner meadows. All parties are warned that the cattle are dangerous. Mr. Marzen will not be responsible if their long pointed horns happen to make it lively for the unlucky wight who trespasses upon the meadows.

Capt. Freeman, Government Inspector of bulls, and John Hillman, Inspector of boilers, visited Tahoe last week and examined the various steamers plying upon the lake. The Niagara passed the inspection in first-class style. The only alteration suggested was painting the name "Life-preservers" on the chest containing these articles. The Governor Stanford was required to repair her life-preservers, to put stays in her steam-drum, to put in a new after-deck and new knees, and to carry a new life-boat.

A GOOD WORK.

The British government has at last succeeded in putting down the secret society of religious murderers in India called Thugs, who, in the service of their goddess, Doorgs, strangled and plundered travelers. The laborious process of hunting them out occupied thirty years, and it is only lately that some of the miscreants were brought before the Prince of Wales, one of whom boasted of having committed sixty-seven murders with his own hand. The god Juggernaut is no longer suffered by the government to crush the devotees who fling themselves under his chariot wheels. It is not long since a host of human sacrifices were offered by certain non-Brahmin tribes; the villages where this took place used to purchase for the purpose men, women and children, the so-called Meriahs. British officers have had the difficult task of effecting the deliverance of these Meriahs and the suppression of the sacrifices, partly by force and partly by gentle means. A single officer, Major Campbell, in the course of eighteen years, according to the Contemporary Review, rescued fifteen hundred men doomed to this sacrificial death. It required watchfulness and energy of the British officials to put down the practice of murdering young girls and burning widows. This prohibition of the practice of Suttee, and the law allowing widows to marry again, were denounced as an attack on the Brahminist religious system, and reckoned among the pretexts for the Sepoy mutiny. The value of human life is to a Hindoo infinitely below that of a cow; he had rather kill ten men than injure one cow.

MAKING LUMBER FROM STRAW.—We read in the Oshkosh (Wis.) Northwestern: "A gentleman of Bushnell, Ill., recently exhibited some samples of lumber that have attracted much attention among the lumber men, and which if it possesses all the virtues that are claimed for it is certainly one of the most important inventions of its kind ever brought to notice. If it is a success it will form a new era in the art of building. To make hardwood lumber out of common wheat straw, with all the effects of polish and finish which is obtainable on the hardest of black walnut and mahogany, at as little cost as clear pine lumber can be made up for, is the claim of the invention, and the sample of which he produces would go far toward verifying his claims. The process is as follows: He takes ordinary straw board, such as is usually manufactured at any paper mill is used for the purpose. As many sheets are taken as are required to make the thickness of lumber desired. These sheets are passed through a chemical solution which thoroughly softens up the fiber, and completely saturates it. The whole is then passed through a succession of rollers, dried and hardened during the passage as well as polished, and then comes out of the other end of the machine hard, dry lumber, ready for use. The inventor claims that the chemical properties hardening in the fibre entirely prevents water soaking, and renders the lumber combustible only in a very hot fire. The hardened finish on the outside also makes it impervious to water. The samples on exhibition could hardly be told from hardwood lumber, and in sawing it the difference could not be detected.

There is a man in Illinois who never seeks the seclusion that a bed-room grants, but prefers to retire with the crickets and the spiders and the ants. He doesn't believe in pampered luxury. Even sleeping on the soft side of a board is an indulgence which he rarely allows. He has a trench dug in his back yard, in which he reposes after a man-servant has covered all but his head with earth. He might find his position rather uncomfortable if a number of cats and dogs understood to hold a matinee in the back yard some evening. Should he die in the night his funeral expenses would be light, and this is some consolation to his friends. Here rests his head upon the lap of earth, a youth to fortune and to fame unknown. He never liked a bed or steamboat berth; but loved to sleep in the back yard along.—[Detroit Free Press.]

The cleanest and neatest bath house in the State is kept by Coleman & Pechner, Barnett's Block, Virginia street. Baths at all hours.

HOW A WOMAN GOES TO A FINE.

(From the Danbury News.)

After balancing herself on the wind-sill of a fourth-story window and bating it is on Fifth Avenue, or the Bowery, or somewhere, "so now," she suddenly starts up as if an idea had struck her, and she says to herself, "I'm going to that fire, and its no use talking." Then she begins to get ready. She stands before the mirror and twists and turns her own hair in all manner of ways to see in which way it will make the most show; then she spikes on one dozen puffs and bangs on the frizzes so they will look "like sea weed around a clam," after stowing away a pound or two of hair pins, and vowing that her arms are just ready to drop off, she casts one more approving glance at her hair, and votes eight to seven that it will do.

What dress to wear is the next question before the meeting-house. To decide this momentous question, she goes to her wardrobe; but, like Dame Hubbard, "when she came there the aforesaid wardrobe was bare," as it were, for all of her dresses had been worn somewhere before. Finally she selects one which, when buttoned up, will not permit her to take a long breath, although she affirms, and is ready to swear, that it is "as loose as can be," but at the same time admits that when she gets that dress on she never can button her shoes; as shoes cannot button themselves, they are buttoned by proxy, and with a hair-pin as the buttoner is not in the place where "I always put it." She also is of the opinion that her feet must have swollen by reason of having worn around the house those big slippers, and "you had better leave two or three of the last buttons unbuttoned." She then proceeds to put on her outer garments, and flatters herself that she will be ready in "half a jiffy." At last the climax is reached when she goes for her new bonnet. She skewers it on the back part of her head, and then looks fourteen ways, to see how the thing sets; turns sideways and takes the bearings; then, a little to the north-east, and takes the latitude and longitude; then she pokes it a little here, bends it there, and mashes it indiscriminately, so that it will not look stiff and set; then she seizes a handglass and takes a retrospective view of her head and all thereto appertaining. Now she adjusts her veil so that the lower edge will come exactly to the tip end of her nose; then she powders a little so that her face will not "shine like a bottle," smooths down the corners of her mouth, says prunes, and puts on her avenue smile, and sails forth to find the fire. Lo! "she starts, she moves" toward the front stairs, but returns for her gloves, and glances at the mirror to see if her rigging is right. Again she heads for the front door, but comes back for a handkerchief, and as she passes the dressing-case, she casts one long, lingering, and positively last appearance look at her reflection, settles her collar, pulls down her cuffs, and making one final and successful scoop for her train, leaves the house. She is out and so is the fire.

The New York Times says: Hardly any Western State unless Oregon, has improved more during the last year than Colorado, and the improvement is shown in the revival of trade and the general growth of the city of Denver. As many as a thousand new buildings are going up there.

White Pine's jail is empty, and that is a very bad sign in a mining camp. When the jail is full, the cemetery filling, faro flourishing, and wickedness generally on the boom, the capitalists invest in the mines and brick buildings go up in all directions.—[Stock Exchange.]
